

I believe that the FCC should preserve Title II and maintain net neutrality. Net neutrality protects American citizens in an age where home internet access has become a utility. Internet access has become more important than home phone service. The FCC should be looking out for the well-being of Americans because major corporations are not. Corporations are looking out for the best interest of themselves, even when it means acting against the best interest of their customers.